While Chet Williams was with Nicklaus Design, he worked as the Senior Design Partner on four courses for me. What sets Chet apart from many others is his insight into how design features affect not only the strategy and playability of a particular golf hole but also how that design feature may affect the longer-term maintenance of the golf course. During the construction phase of each course Chet worked very closely with the construction team to insure every facet of his design was constructed to his high standards. He also worked closely with the entire development team, making sure the golf course and the real estate were both optimized. Since each course has been completed, Chet has continued to visit each of them when in the area to inspect the courses and see how they've matured.

Chet was a joy to work with on each of our projects and his passion for golf design and for the game itself, show in the product he puts on the ground. Chet continually produces golf courses that are challenging, have great shot values and will undoubtedly stand the test of time. His courses have proven to be enjoyable to play over and over again for players of all skill levels.
